

that will singularly be capable of defying both flood and drought. In the coming decades, a climate-smart variety of rice may be the best hope of increasing food production rapidly, at low cost and without adverse environmental consequences in developing countries like India where human populations are increasing most rapidly. As IR8 turns fifty, lets hope that its new varieties stand the test of changing times as well as changing climate.